The activation of human alpha-chymotrypsin and trypsin by polysaccharides was studied by gel filtration chromatography and assay of the amidolytic activity of the enzymes. 2. It was found that, for both enzymes, polysaccharides with molecular weights over 10,000 were bound more strongly to the activated enzyme than to the native one. 3. Maximum activation was achieved at pH 6 for chymotrypsin and pH 6.5 for trypsin, with activation ratios of about 7 to 10. Polysaccharides having a low molecular weight (1 to
