A: PixInsight has been discontinued. Below is a list of historical versions of PixInsight: 1.1 1.2 1.3 1.4 1.5 1.6 1.7 1.8 2.0 2.1 2.2 2.3 2.4 2.5 2.6 2.7 2.8 3.0 You can get updates via the Windows client from here (versions 3.6, 3.9, and 4.0 available) A: There are also other free options to stabilize image files. My favorite is the free option from the Sunfreeware site: PixImage. It can be used for 2D stabilization and Sharpen (which removes the background). The current version is 1.5.2 (2009-05-22) and is in C/C++ language. A: I used to use one more on the same website called ImageStabilizer. I used it to stabilize my photos and post-process them. I haven't used it in a while and this is the only site I found with it but it may just be looking. Here is the link. The present invention relates to the field of microelectromechanical system (MEMS) integrated circuits and more particularly to the fabrication of such an integrated circuit. Microelectromechanical system (MEMS) integrated circuits have been developed that use silicon (Si) nanowires as the mechanical moving parts in the circuits. For example, U.S. Pat. Nos. 5,096,390 and 5,010,495 disclose an electrical switch that uses a solid state silicon (Si) micromechanical structure that includes a number of vertically spaced apart movable mechanical switches mounted to an underlying substrate with anchored cantilever springs to form a bi-stable circuit arrangement. U.S. Pat. No. 5,096,390 discloses an electrical switch with a single stationary input/output terminal. When any of the micromechanical switches in the array is made to close, all the switches in the array are brought into contact. The contacts from all of the switches then remain in contact. This architecture prevents the contacts in the array from dis-engaging when a switching event causes a contact in one of the switches to close and
