Many employees find that their work lives are overwhelming, overloaded with projects and expectations that take up more and more time. When we feel overwhelmed, we can't think clearly and are more likely to get things wrong. We have less energy and often find that our focus and productivity drop off. Chrissi Graber, a certified coach and social strategist, has identified six critical demands facing today's workforce that can derail careers and those of the employees who are struggling with them.

1. Tackling the pressures of productivity Many employees are working longer hours and accomplishing less. These workloads are often cyclical and tied to managerial priorities. If you're feeling overworked, it could be because of project deadlines or to meet external expectations, such as quotas or schedules. When we feel pressured, we become more stressed and are less likely to perform to our best, whether that's in our work or our personal lives.
2. Juggling multiple roles The expectations on employees are growing, but so is the number of roles they're expected to fulfill. Many employees juggle these roles while also trying to manage other responsibilities such as family and school. When we find ourselves overwhelmed, the last thing we want to do is make and follow a series of split-second decisions when our brains are thinking so much.
3. Moving from role to role If the roles we're fulfilling are not aligned to our career paths, it can be very difficult to reach your goals and reach your full potential. Many workers are feeling the pinch of juggling multiple roles and find themselves jumping from one
