With the standing of the team's South American counterparts, the feeling could hardly be any different in the United States. But in the last four days, Sporting Kansas City has defied all odds and won three matches, the latest, in dramatic fashion, at the opening of this weekend's AT&T MLS All-Star Game in Philadelphia. Kicking off with a 2-1 victory against FC Barcelona in the first game of the weekend, Sporting KC then fell at the hands of Real Madrid in the opening day of the game on Thursday. Sporting Kansas City's support group, soccer's answer to the Minnesota Vikings, lit up City 16, the largest attendance for any Sporting KC match this season, with a fantastic atmosphere. Throughout this stretch, Sporting Kansas City's new manager, Peter Vermes, has been the man to beat. He has been a key part of the team's changes and growth as Sporting Kansas City's players have responded well. With an electric atmosphere and some quality players that are young and hungry, a return to the top of the Eastern Conference seems almost guaranteed. The fact that we have made it to the point where the stars of South American soccer are starting to see that we are a good team in this league, and possibly a decent team in CONCACAF, it's going to be a fun year. Peter Vermes For this

It is well-known that non-coding RNAs (ncRNAs) play an important role in the development and progression of type 2 diabetes (T2D). Recently, non-coding RNA maternally expressed gene (lncRNA-NEAT1) has been demonstrated to be involved in the development of various diseases including T2D. However, the role and mechanism of lncRNA-NEAT1 in the development and progression of T2D are still unknown. In this review, we have summarized the studies conducted to elucidate the role of lncRNA-NEAT1 in the development and progression of T2D, and discussed the potential mechanism of lncRNA-NEAT1 in T2D. Composite ratio trend as a reflection of biological age in epithelial cytoplasm. The quantitative trend of epithelial cytoplasmic composition changes as an age-related phenomenon. This is characterized by a gradual loss of those soluble proteins which do not appear to have a quantitative but a qualitative role in the system. The loss of these proteins is accompanied by a corresponding increase in the concentrations of those enzymes, as well as in the total amount of phosphorylases and inorganic pyrophosphatase. The quantitative decline of the latter factors and their qualitative dissociation from the system are accompanied by a parallel increase of glycogen and an elevated number
