Design, synthesis and in vitro evaluation of 2,2'-dihydroxybiphenyl hydroxamic acid sulfonamide hydroxamic peptidase inhibitors. We describe the design and synthesis of 2,2'-dihydroxybiphenyl sulfonamide hydroxamic peptidase inhibitors which have the potential to be potent oral anti-neoplastic agents. Hydroxamic acid peptidase inhibitors (HAPIs) are the most potent small molecule inhibitors against aspartic peptidase. These HAPIs have potential activity against the tumour vasculature, making them ideal candidates for anti-neoplastic chemotherapeutic agents. In this paper, we describe the design, synthesis and in vitro evaluation of 2,2'-dihydroxybiphenyl hydroxamic acid sulfonamide hydroxamic peptidase inhibitors (DAI). The in vitro evaluation of these inhibitors in neuroblastoma, ovarian, breast and prostate cancer cells is also reported.

Q: Is a drop in student standards a bad thing? This year (2016-2017) is the first time I have taught a course. That is, the first time I have been responsible for any aspect of the curriculum. Although I am an experienced programmer and trainer, I am not a college or university administrator. Because I am a newbie, I came to learn a lot from several people I respect. One piece of advice that I received was that I should be extremely careful about how much I revise or improve anything until the first day of the course. I can't find the source for that now, 82138339de
