"I am not wrong in saying that in your Bhagawad Gita only your rich (Sanskrit) or poor (Hindi) devotees read this (of yours), whereas all other people are reading the other Bhagawad Gita. Be that as it may, the Bhagawad Gita neither belongs to the rich nor to the poor (dharma-drishya), for all belong to the class of the liberated one, that is to say every human being is a liberated being and as such, all belong to the class of the Bhagavat. Even a child that is just born and has not yet attained his or her hundredth year, the liberated being though a child who has not yet attained his or her hundredth year, is not the child of a poor man nor the child of a rich man." This is what the Bombay Yoga University Lecturer Govind Ganesh Teltumbde had to say yesterday at the SMAAWS conference here. He stressed that Gita, as an ancient text, should be read by all, not just by the "rich" and "poor" and that those who read it should "live in it" as do those who practise yoga. Ganesh Teltumbde read the sms from me on this topic and replied the very next day. "Rich" and "poor" is an illusion as it relates to religion. As I have said in my book, "Religion is our
