Firefox enjoys a great reputation in the browser arena thanks to its impressive array of features. This is also its big problem.

When it comes to being listed in the same line as the Chrome, the chief competitor for the explorer's throne, the giant leaps in terms of speed and opening web pages takes a backseat, which is why many users flocked to Pale Moon browser, which is in many ways a fork of Firefox designed for its particular niche. While these issues may sound like a turn-off, the fact that Firefox can be labeled as "the champion" when it comes to performance, doesn't mean it's completely flawless. One of the worst things about the browser is that the main function it has is full of numerous bugs. How many times have you landed on a page only to see it disappear from the window? Or how about when the page was completely blank? Firefox's UI may be decent for most users, but when it comes to addressing common issues, the browser is sorely lacking. And despite the security concerns it has stirred in the last few years, no one has cared about fixing these.

However, there is one solution to this problem and it's the subject of today's review – Firefox Profile Manager. This piece of software is a suite of utilities which can be used to troubleshoot and analyze Firefox's issues, check for extensions, fix cookies, clear browsing and add-ons and the like. For most people, having lots of options is the first step towards a great user experience. However, even though the internet is full of choices, most of the time it can be hard to find a particular type of software, even though it is sometimes the most wanted. Firefox's extension and add-ons store at Addons.mozilla.org is one of the biggest collections of extensions and add-ons out there, which is why having a good search engine is of the utmost importance. Of course, finding the right result can be tricky sometimes, especially if your keyword is not that familiar to you. Therefore, today's review will be dedicated to a browser extension named Bookmarks and Favorites Manager. In fact, the tool isn't really for viewing bookmarks, but it does more than that. What it does Although some users may think it's a bit of a hassle, having one or two

What's New In?

Pale Moon profile backup tool Description: How to Backup and Restore the Individual Panes in Dock Many web browsers provide options that allow you to customize and modify their features, and since it usually involves the exchange of a lot of small files, the process becomes longer and more complex. You need to be careful when it comes to the files. The files you might need to copy from a computer to another include those regarding your browser's appearance and the content it displays on the screen. One of the most standard things about a browser is the fact that it opens multiple tabs. Some web browsers even provide the option to display a certain number of tabs. However, what if you want to copy only a certain tab to a folder with an alternative name? In that case, you will need to know how to backup and restore the individual panes in the dock. Also, what if you want to copy the setup for a certain browser? To do so, you will need to know how to backup and restore the dock. We will now see how you can do so with four different web browsers, even if they are the most popular ones, in their latest version. How to backup and restore the individual panes in dock in Chrome Chrome is the most visited browser in the world, and it's clear that there is no doubt about how useful it is. With that in mind, it is logical that it provides the option to customize almost any aspect of its functioning. For instance, you can choose to save the tabs open when you exit, or you can disable the screensaver. But this does not end here. You can also choose the looks of the browser, so it is possible to customize the Dock, the tab bar, the address bar, as well as how the search and address bar are displayed. One of the most obvious features to customize is the appearance of the tabs, but how will you do so if you want to keep your favorite ones? First of all, you should know that Chrome comes with the option to change the appearance of the tabs. These are called applets, and they are basically little windows that contain some information. If you want to do so, you will need to open the settings by clicking on the image of the three horizontal lines. Once this happens, you will be able to change the tab color, size, placement, and even add a star to create a button that lets you view your favorite. To copy the applets,
