I've read a lot about what makes really great models. The main thing I've heard is...practice. Don't try to overthink things: just practice. A: .properties file is the use of properties to get the values in java code. properties file is used for dynamic property values like HTTP URL, Google API key, DB connection. Java files are a part of compiled Java code and have no relation to property files. They have a specific functionality. Here java files are declared, and they are used in the code. Properties file should be located in the same directory as the .class files (.class files are .java files that have been compiled). Properties files are not written to the filesystem, but instead (in Java 1.5 and later) they are written to a cache in the class loader. Most Java applications are organized with a main.java file that has a main() method. It compiles that file into bytecode, and after successful compilation creates a .class file. A ".java" file is generated as a class file, even though it does not have a main() method.
