The director of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children said Tuesday that his center had taken steps to prevent its computers from getting hacked, and pledged to help in any way it can. "My heart goes out to the individual families of the victims," said Tom Blickstein, director of the center. "But we all know that what we saw today will only result in the suffering of our fellow human beings." Mr. Blickstein and other experts on child pornography said that the Web site on which the images appeared was linked to the RUMMAGE.COM Web site, which they said was a major exporter of child pornography. Mr. Blickstein said the FBI took down the site, but he declined to say whether the authorities had started any criminal proceedings. Three faces of two-photon absorber: 2-photon absorption, one-photon induced absorption, and photodegradation. We have developed a two-photon ionization spectroscopy method to distinguish the two-photon absorption cross sections (2PACs) from those induced by one photon for three indole derivatives with different structures (3,4-dihydroxyindole, 2-methyl-3,4-dihydroxyindole, and indole). The effects of two-photon excitation on different 2PACs have been investigated, and their spectral evolution patterns have been analyzed. As a result, we found that the dominant 2PACs for these three indole derivatives should be from two-photon absorption and excitation-induced fluorescence. In order to study the photodegradation effect on indole derivatives, two methods, spontaneous decay and two-photon excitation fluorescence, have been applied to compare the photodegradation rate of different indole derivatives.
