Features Pro's Text Statistics is a very lightweight application. It gives you basic stats of your text. You have the option to save three word phrases, document summary or graphs with words and frequencies. It's simple to use and not a complicated program. It allows you to analyze your text easily. It has good features that will help you analyse your text. It has many options to choose from. It displays graphs and a list of different stats. It doesn't have the option to print stats. It doesn't have any other advanced features. Cons Text Statistics needs too much space in order to fit all the tools and features. Summary Text Statistics has several useful features, including the option to use three word phrases, document summary or graphs with words and their frequency. It doesn't have advanced features and sometimes it's a bit tricky to use. Pricing and Availability There are two editions of Text Statistics. The Standard edition has a price tag of $15, while the Plus edition has a price tag of $22. No matter which edition you choose, the application requires .net framework to run. What's New Updates in version 2.0: We now allow you to save the applications user license, which means you can have two licenses for a single device. We also provide for those who use Mac OS X, a trial version of the Mac desktop integration. The trial version doesn't have some of the advanced features and could use some polishing. During installation, you'll need to enter and confirm your Windows Live ID so we can provide you with your license. License information is saved to the roaming user data folder under "AppData\Roaming\" as a 64-bit.txt file. If you need to delete it, you will need to delete the file yourself. If the file is not found, Windows will not warn you. To move the license file to a different computer, you'll need to copy it over to the roaming user data folder under "AppData\Roaming\" and rename the file. Closed captioning is supported via the AT&T Captioned Media Server. Some specific code may need to be added 09e8f5149f
