It may not be summer right now, but winter has begun to set in and that usually means the cold. So, with the cold season upon us, what better to do than to find that idyllic getaway and start dreaming of sun-kissed spots with clear waters, steaming soup and fluffy beds in a park or on the beach? This week, Lonely Planet announced the top 15 most popular places to visit in March 2018 based on visitor figures from the past year. Photo: Pixabay The top five places are all in Europe, and there's more of the continent on this list than a certain well-known island nation. Norway is home to the top spot, with the country's capital, Oslo, attracting the most visitors to the country this month, with a whopping 11.8 million. The second place on the list goes to Finland, with its second largest city, Oulu, drawing 6.2 million visitors. Then there's Prague, with six million visitors and taking third spot on the list: Reykjavik, home to the fourth most popular city, with four million visitors; and Italy, which moves up to take fifth spot with four and a half million visitors. The United Kingdom gets a paltry 1.2 million visitors in first place, followed by Ireland at number two with 1.4 million, and the United States at number four with 1.7 million. Dublin is at number six, with 1.8 million visitors, and for those of you want to stay somewhere with more than half a million visitors, stay in Amsterdam, which comes in at seven. Malta moves up five spots to eighth place.
