The current program, begun in 1999, was a T32 grant that was renamed the Ulrich ROCK-T32. The goals of the renewal application remain unchanged. The University of Texas at San Antonio offers an outstanding research-oriented environment, strong interdisciplinary training in molecular neuroscience with some of the finest neuroscience faculty in the country. Students who completed their basic neurobiology training between 1997 and 2002 have done well with 73% obtaining academic positions and 47% obtaining postdoctoral positions. The faculty are among the strongest in the country and this application seeks to continue to provide the best training available to ambitious young scientists. A close up of CpG methylation and gene regulation of the innate immune receptor Dectin-1 in myeloid cells and neutrophils from patients with Multiple Myeloma (MM) and donors. Multiple Myeloma (MM) is a disease of clonal proliferation of myeloid cells in the bone marrow. Donor-derived therapy-induced neutropenia and other marrow suppressive regimens such as melphalan are universally used in MM treatment. The role of myeloid cells in the host-tumor immune response has gained attention in recent years and in particular the Toll-like receptor (TLR) Dectin-1 has been recognized as a critical player in this response. CpG methylation is an epigenetic change that can result in silencing of gene expression and may be the mechanism of silencing the myeloid innate immune receptor Dectin-1 in myeloid cells. We sought to determine the methylation status of Dectin-1 in myeloid cells from healthy donors and those from patients with MM using a quantitative methylation specific PCR approach. Additionally, we measured Dectin-1 gene expression in myel

The first debate between presidential candidates Donald Trump and Hillary Clinton took place on October 9, amid a week of violent protests in which black Americans were killed by police.

Trump painted Clinton, the Democratic frontrunner, as a racist. During the campaign, Clinton has been accused of playing the race card by criticizing white supremacists in the context of Trump's anti-black rhetoric. What do you think of the tactics the two candidates are using? Twenty-two percent of respondents believe that the tactics of both candidates are fair, with only a 3 percent difference in opinion. Twenty-six percent of respondents believe that only Clinton has the best strategies, whereas 8 percent believe that only Trump has the best strategy. “Trump talks, but Clinton shows her cards, and Hillary Clinton clearly has one winning strategy; the other is playing a game of poker that just might get her blown off the table,” said Dr. Robert P. George, president of Princeton University. “The Clinton campaign is not the same old, same old. It is clearly far more active and taking on the Trump campaign on their own turf. It is clear that her campaign has been steadily deploying a strategy, and it is working. That is because she has a 570a42141b
