Download Scam Of ArmagonQ: How to provide a generator function to do a shallow-copy (share and increment a counter on deepcopies)? Basically, what I want to do is deepcopy a dict, and modify the deepcopy to increment a counter. I'm working in ipython, and I could do this, by using a dictionary that I append to, instead of a dict. df = pd.DataFrame({'key':range(5)}) d = df.to_dict() d += [dict({'counter',i}) for i in range(10)] for d in df.to_dict()]

The code above works, but I really just want a function that I can use instead of the full code above. I do not want to use loops; is there a way to get this done in a "pythonic" way? I'm looking for a function that takes the below, and turns it into the code above. I know there's a method for deepcopy called deepcopy, but it seems to only accept a nested dict. def deepcopy_increment_counter(d): d += [dict({'counter',i}) for i in range(10)] for d in copy.deepcopy(d)] The function should accept the below, and will return the code above: df = pd.DataFrame({'key':range(5)}) d = df.to_dict() # [('key', 0), ('key', 1), ('key', 2), ('key', 3), ('key', 4), ('key', 5)] A: Just create a function like you did and then pass the data in: df = pd.DataFrame({'key':range(5)}) d = df.to_dict() def deepcopy_increment_counter(d): d += [dict({'counter',i}) for i in range(10)] for d in copy.deep
