That's the perspective that the Philadelphia Flyers seemed to be taking into the 2019-20 season, as the team saw little reason to make changes to a well-designed roster. But the team's recent struggles have opened a lot of eyes, as the Flyers haven't won a game since Oct. 26 against the Toronto Maple Leafs. They've managed to extend their losing streak to six games, the longest in the NHL this season. It's fair to say that Claude Giroux and Wayne Simmonds have performed below expectations, and it's not unreasonable to wonder if the Flyers are back on the right track. If they are, then there is no reason to make significant changes, especially with the season nearing its end. But if the Flyers are on the wrong path, then changes are needed, and on Thursday, one Flyers forward said the team is prepared to make some significant changes. Kyle Carter of Philadelphia's NBC affiliate 1040 The Fan said the team "is ready to move on from this losing streak if it is going to get back to being a competitive team." He's not the first member of the Flyers to suggest a roster shakeup is in order. "As the streak gets to six games, it's hard to argue that it hasn't been a problem," said defenceman Andrew MacDonald. "I'm not sure who else to ask. I think the best thing is to move on from it and try to start winning." With the Flyers sitting in 11th place in the Eastern Conference, five points out of a playoff spot, they're not going to be winning much with the personnel they have. The team that's currently in
